

The Bridge Builders: Aaron Wolf

(Information was extracted from George Gould's Indiana Covered Bridges Thru the Years for the following)

Though the years there as been confusion regarding which Wolf was the son and which was the father. Aaron Wolf was the son of father Henry. It was Henry who should be credited with having built covered bridges. Arron operated a sawmill.

Together Henry and Aaron may have collaborated on six bridges in Indiana. One of these, the Ramp Creek bridge, was moved from Putnam County in the 1930s and now graces the entrance to Brown County State Park; it is the only double-lane (or double-barrelled) and oldest covered bridge in Indiana. Other bridges still standing built by Henry Wolf are Portland Mills and Crooks, both in Parke County.
